Information for Contributors

Child Development Perspectives (CDP) emphasizes brief, well-synthesized reviews of research, typically focusing on emerging lines of inquiry in developmental science. The journal sometimes publishes essays on policy, statistics methods, and other topics suitable for the readership. Papers are welcome from all fields that inform contemporary developmental science. Manuscripts reporting new empirical findings are not appropriate for CDP.

Most articles appearing in CDP are commissioned by editorial staff. CDP also accepts articles that are not commissioned, although authors are encouraged to contact Judith Smetana, Editor in Chief, at cdp@srcd.org if they are not sure whether their article topic is appropriate. Both types of articles undergo peer review.

CDP is instituting a new occasional feature called Two Views, which will consist of a pair of papers, published side-by-side, on an important or emerging topic in the field. Two scholars with different views on a topic of interest will be commissioned to contribute short pieces outlining their views. These papers will be invited and will undergo peer review. Authors may contact the Editor, Judith Smetana, at cdp@srcd.org with proposals or suggestions.

Authors are asked to make their submissions accessible to the full spectrum of the CDP readership, which includes scientists, students, policy makers, and the media. Plain language is preferred whenever possible; jargon should be avoided. Because of the international nature of the readership, authors should avoid writing that assumes the reader is a citizen of or is intimately familiar with the author's country.

All submissions are limited to 3,000 words (the word count includes the main text plus notes, acknowledgments, and appendices but not the abstract, tables, figure legends, or references). There is no limit to the number of tables or figures but most published articles will have no more than four figures and tables total. For author-initiated papers, the cover letter should indicate why the topic is particularly well suited for CDP.

Manuscript Submission

Manuscripts should be submitted electronically to the Child Development Perspectives online submission site at <http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/cdp>. A corresponding author's submission to CDP implies that all co-authors have agreed to the content and form of the manuscript. The corresponding author is responsible for informing all co-authors, in a timely manner, of manuscript submission, editorial decisions, reviews, and revisions. Authors will be asked to complete a Conflict of Interest Declaration immediately following the manuscript's acceptance for publication.

The manuscript should be prepared as a .doc, .docx, or .rtf file (not as .pdf or .tex files) and should be double-spaced throughout with 12-point font. Please follow all guidelines on format, style, and ethics provided in the Publication Manual (6th ed.) of the American Psychological Association. All submissions are screened using iThenticate, a software tool that examines originality in scholarly writing. For more information, please see the Committee on Publication Ethics' Text Recycling Guidelines: <https://publicationethics.org/text-recycling-guidelines>.

Please Note: Color figures publish online for free, but there is a $300 cost to print in color. More technical information on figures (accepted file types, image quality, etc.) is available at Wiley-Blackwell Author Services.

Submission Guidelines

On receipt, a manuscript is evaluated by journal staff for its conformity to the overall guidelines and policies of the journal. Title pages and other identifying information are removed to facilitate blind review. The corresponding author will be notified of an editorial decision, typically within 8 weeks. Manuscripts accepted for publication are often edited extensively to improve readability and accessibility. Inquiries and suggestions regarding editorial policy may be directed to Judith Smetana, Editor in Chief, Child Development Perspectives, at cdp@srcd.org.
