Identifying Barriers to Increasing Equity in Developmental Science

The goal of this workshop is to identify and tackle the conceptual/theoretical, methodological, and institutional barriers that are impeding equity at different levels of the academy and, specifically, in developmental science. In this session, we aim to imagine an equitable academy by facilitating connections among participants to generate coalitions that promote additional progress towards equity and justice. Attendees can select to join one of three breakout groups to discuss conceptual/theoretical, methodological, or institutional challenges. Within these breakout sessions, the session organizers will moderate informal conversations following the "What? So What? Now What" model to promote critical reflections and collective dialogues among attendees to help identify actionable next steps. Bring your ideas, your experiences, and your collaborative minds to this interactive session.
